Science Watch podcasts from NMSR [3]

Science Watch [4], sponsored by New Mexicans for Science and Reason, is a weekly science radio show, broadcast on KABQ 1350 AM in the Albuquerque area. But now, with the debut of the Science Watch podcasts, the show is available to everybody with access to the internet. Among the shows relevant to the creationism/evolution controversy are interviews of Barbara Forrest and Kenneth R. Miller, and interviews of Nick Matzke and Pedro Irigonegaray are expected to be added to the archived episodes [5] soon.

Co-host M. Kim Johnson explains of the shows, "Almost all have a science story of the week, media fumble (and occasional touchdown), creation corner, science trivia question, and the main event. We try to have fun and still hit the serious stuff. Remember, folks, these are recorded live, so you get to hear the sneezes, uh ohs, and the whole kit and caboodle. Nothing is edited. We take responsibility for our own mistakes, and there are a few -- just to see if you are paying attention."
