Catching up with RNCSE [3]

Selected content from volume 27, numbers 3-4, of Reports of the National Center for Science Education is now available [4] on NCSE's website, featuring Joe Felsenstein's "Has Natural Selection Been Refuted? The Arguments of William Dembski." Felsenstein concludes, "Dembski argues that there are theorems that prevent natural selection from explaining the adaptations that we see. His arguments do not work. There can be no theorem saying that adaptive information is conserved and cannot be increased by natural selection. ... When we see adaptation, we are not looking at positive evidence of billions and trillions of interventions by a designer." And there are reviews, too: Lauri Lebo (the author of The Devil in Dover reviews Matthew Chapman's Forty Days and Forty Nights, Tim Berra reviews Stanley A. Rice's Encyclopedia of Evolution, and Gary Hurd reviews Fazale Rana and Hugh Ross's Origins of Life.

If you like what you see, why not subscribe to RNCSE today? The current issue (volume 28, number 1) features a suite of articles and commentaries on the forced resignation of Chris Comer from the Texas Education Agency, Paul Heinrich's debunking of the mysterious spheres of Ottosdal, and reviews of Robert Schaedewald's Worlds of Their Own, Science, Evolution, and Creationism, Deborah B. Haarsma and Loren D. Haarsma's Origins: A Reformed Look at Creation, Design, & Evolution, and Sean B. Carroll's The Making of the Fittest. And more is in the pipeline for future issues of RNCSE, including articles by Eugenie C. Scott and Glenn Branch and reviews of books by Pascal Richet, Francisco Ayala, and Carl Zimmer, as well as reports of creationist activity in Florida, Louisiana, and Texas.
