Call for Papers: Teaching Evolution in the Classroom [3]

J&T

The Journal of Effective Teaching [4], a peer-reviewed electronic journal devoted to the discussion of teaching excellence in colleges and universities, is calling [5] (PDF) for papers for a special issue on the teaching of evolution in a university setting. Topics may include Darwinism in the history and philosophy of science, politics, and religion; evolution and the nature of science; barriers in the understanding of evolution; strategies for teaching controversial issues related to evolution and/or Darwinism; educational research in the teaching of evolution; challenging preconceptions in the classroom, and engaging students who have strong religious views in scientific investigations as part of a liberal arts degree. Articles will be accepted until May 1, 2009.
