NCSE's Scott to be on Culture Shocks [3]

NCSE's executive director Eugenie C. Scott will discuss the significance of Ida, the 47-million-year-old primate fossil dominating the headlines, on the Culture Shocks [4] radio show on May 26, 2009 at 4:00 p.m. EST. Hosted by the Reverend Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State [5], Culture Shocks "examines issues and trends in today's culture wars through conversations with and about some of the most fascinating figures of our times." To listen on-line, or to find a local station that airs the show, visit the Culture Shocks website [4].
