RNCSE 34:2 now on-line [3]

NCSE is pleased to announce that the latest issue of Reports of the National Center for Science Education is now available on-line. The issue — volume 34, number 2 — features commentary on the Bill Nye-Ken Ham debate from John W. Patterson, Andrew J. Petto, and Steve Watkins, as well as Bernard Winograd's reflections on science and public policy in general. And for his regular People and Places column, Randy Moore discusses the "man tracks" of Glen Rose, Texas.

Plus a host of reviews of books on the history of biology: Carol Anelli reviews Charles Darwin: A Celebration of his Life and Legacy, Lee Ehrman reviews Erika Lorraine Milam's Looking for a Few Good Males, Paul Lawrence Farber reviews Ted R. Anderson's The Life of David Lack, Scott Gilbert reviews Rudolf A. Raff's Once We All Had Gills, William Kimler reviews Peter J. Bowler's Darwin Deleted, and Keith Stewart Thomson reviews J. David Pleins's The Evolving God.

All of these articles, features, and reviews are freely available in PDF form from <http://reports.ncse.com> [4]. Members of NCSE will shortly be receiving in the mail the print supplement to Reports 34:2, which, in addition to summaries of the on-line material, contains news from the membership, a regular column in which NCSE staffers offer personal reports on what they've been doing to defend the teaching of evolution, a regular column interviewing NCSE's favorite people, and more besides.
