A chance to help NCSE's archives! [3]

NCSE's archives house a unique trove of material on the creationism/evolution controversy, and we regard it as part of our mission to preserve it for posterity — as well as for occasions such as Kitzmiller v. Dover, where NCSE's archives helped to establish the creationist antecedents of the "intelligent design" movement. And we are beginning to amass a similar trove of material on disputes over climate change education. We cordially invite you now to help NCSE's archives keep up-to-date by purchasing books through our wish list [4] at Amazon.com. And it's not just books — gifts of needed hardware, software, and office equipment are welcome, too, and so are supplies for Science Booster Club events! All of these donations are tax-deductible. And if you make your purchase via Amazon.com's Smile page for NCSE [5], NCSE receives 0.5% of the price (for eligible purchases). We're pleased to report that over three hundred items have been purchased already, and we thank the donors for their generosity. Won't you join them in supporting NCSE?
