Help wanted: part-time summer interns [3]

NCSE is seeking to hire one or two part-time summer interns to work on science education activism projects, with a particular focus on either climate change education or evolution education. This is a unique opportunity for someone with a science background to learn about science advocacy to support one of the most important groups: science teachers. This is a temporary position based in Oakland, California, running from June to August 2016. Further information about duties, qualifications, salary and benefits, and the application process is available from NCSE's job page [4].
